Evolution Markets Adds Structured Transactions Expert to Renewable Energy Markets' Top-Ranked Brokerage Team

White Plains, NY (January 11, 2009): Evolution Markets Inc. announces the hire Katherine Ryzhaya an experienced power markets professional with extensive knowledge in the negotiation of power purchase agreements and structured transactions for renewable energy markets. Ms. Ryzhaya's addition to the Evolution Markets Renewable Energy Markets team expands the firm's coverage of structured transaction services for renewable energy developers across the country.

Katherine Ryzhaya joins Evolution Markets' to focus on Greenfield renewable projects. She will be responsible for advising renewable project developers on how to maximize the revenue streams associated with the environmental attributes from their projects as well as negotiating power purchase agreements on their behalf. Katherine will also focus on regulatory policy developments throughout the Western Electricity Coordinating Council (WECC). She joins the industry's leading green power structured transactions and REC brokerage desk, which has been named for the past six years as "Best Broker: North American Renewable Energy Certificates" by the readers of Environmental Finance magazine.

"Evolution Markets' has worked hard to provide the industry's best brokerage and structured transaction services to the wholesale renewable energy market and project developers," said Andrew Kolchins, Managing Director of Renewable Energy Markets at Evolution Markets. "Katherine has deep experience with the California and WECC power markets as well as her knowledge of developing regulatory initiatives. Her background will add instant value and expertise to our clients in the WECC and across the country."

Ms. Ryzhaya joins Evolution Markets' with experience in power markets, renewable energy transactions, climate policy, and utility operations. Most recently, she served as a Principal in Structured Transactions for Pacific Gas and Electric Company's (PG&E) commercial negotiation unit. Prior to PG&E, Katherine held various positions at RBC Capital Markets and UBS. She holds an MBA with a concentration in Finance from Duke University.
